Why should you attend the 16th Annual Corporate Governance Conference at The University of Texas at Dallas on March 28, 2018? Well, that depends on what your goal is. For some of you, it’s getting to hear from the Chairman of Deloitte as he discusses the very latest hot topics including diversity, audit issues, regulations and taxes and yes, trends in who actually gets elected to boards. For others of you, the opportunity to hear how Intuit is changing its corporate culture using Agile and Scrum techniques. Many board members and executives are not even really sure what Agile and Scrum are, so it will be all new. For others of you, hearing about geopolitical risks globally will get your attention… maybe frighten you to death, but risk is a huge issue today. For still others, it’s what the dynamics are in the board room and how to build a strategic board that actually performs. For others, it’s hearing from the true expert on corporate governance including what Larry Fink of Black Rock has said about a corporation’s social responsibility. And speaking of regulations, you’ll find out how we got into this expensive mess. Finally, campaign finance and political contributions will get your blood flowing for sure. And speaking of liquids, yes, we will have some to give you after the program because you’ll need them. All in all, you’re in for a great educational experience.
