“What you are, speaks so loudly that I cannot hear what you say.”~ Ralph Waldo Merson.

If you want to have fun in a party, sit down at the corner of the room and watch people interactions. You may discover a thing or two...Because a speaker’s stance, facial expressions, hand gestures, or the movement of the entire body, effectively communicate more to their audience, than any actual spoken words.

Is it true that only 7% of a communication is words? Then, how effective are we when we are trying to communicate?

Great researchers such as Paul Ekman, an American psychologist who is a pioneer in the study of emotions and their relation to facial expressions, and Allan Pease, an Australian body language expert and co-author of fifteen books, have influenced Iveth Valera’s way to read and listen communications, beyond words. Join Iveth in her class: Making Your Body Speak or...Listen, as she transfers some practical non-verbal communication techniques that we can all use to improve our communications.

Leadership 1.0, Technical .5

Iveth Valera, PM

Iveth Valera was born in Venezuela, a country rich on traditions and “gestures” that served as a vast source of information to answer her curiosity on Non-Verbal communications.

Bilingual, analytical, creative, dynamic, and highly motivated, Iveth has more than 20-years of experience developing and managing international resources and cross-functional teams in both technology and non-profit organizations. She has also an extensive experience delivering application solutions and projects across digital, manufacturing, and financial business units. Additional roles fulfilled include mergers & acquisitions technical management, disaster recovery planning, change management, incidents management, and portfolio management.

Iveth Valera works at AT&T for the DIRECTV Division as a Program Manager. She is also very active in Toastmasters International where she has earned the Distinguished Toastmasters educational level, twice, and where she has held offices at club, area, and most recent as the Immediate District 50 Administration Manager. In her spare time, she coaches a Toastmasters Gavel club (underage) guiding children in the art of public speaking and leadership.

Iveth holds a specialization in Business Administration from Universidad de Carabobo, and a Bachelor of Science Degree in Computer Science from Universidad Tecnologica del Centro at Venezuela, where she graduated in the top 10% of her class.

She has delivered Body Language and Non-verbal communication workshops for various groups, including Job Hunting, Networking, and Toastmasters groups.
